

Compound noun

A compound noun consists of two or more words that express a complete thought.

It consists of a headword and one or more modifiers used to refer to people or things more specifically in terms of :

- 1) what they are for
- 2) what they are made of
- 3) what work they do
- 4) what kind they are
- 5) or where and when they happen or are used

Note : Compound nouns are written as two separate words (web site), as two words joined with a hyphen (web-site) or as one word (website). Unfortunately, there are no rules. Some compounds change over time.

- 1 Can opener - application form
- 2 Paper plates - glass tube
- 3 History teacher - airline safety inspector
- 4 Health food magazine - detective story
- 5 University library - summer holidays

Plural forms of compound nouns

In general, we make the plural of a compound noun by adding s/es to the headword.

Note : A woman can be anything except an adjective.

Compound adjectives

A compound adjective is a group of two or more words linked with a hyphen when they are before a noun (acting as a single idea describing something) but not after a noun.

Examples :

She is a well-recognized expert in technology. (with a hyphen)

The expert is well recognized in technology. (no hyphen)

Compare the meaning in these following sentences:

1) saw a man-scanning machine.

2) saw a man scanning machine.

In (1) a man-scanning is a compound adjective describing the machine.

In (2) a man is scanning a machine. (no compound adjective).

1 and 2 have two different meanings.

The -ing forms

We use the -ing form in these ways :

- 1) Taking blood or varicose vein treatment.....
- 2) This new technology is transforming every facet.....
- 3) growth with this emerging technology.

In 1, Taking is a gerund (see below), acting as the subject.
A gerund refers to an activity or process.

In 2, transforming is a present participle .This is used in continuous tenses (in the above example, the present continuous) and reduced relative clauses.

.... they operate, allowing the doctor to focus with (=...,which allows the doctor to focus....)

In 3, emerging is an adjective.

Gerund functions

We use gerunds in the following ways :

- As the subject of a verb :

Envisioning your completed property with AR.....

- As the complement of the subject :

AR is enhancing the real world with virtual objects.

- As the object of a verb :

.....tried decorating your home....

- After a preposition :

We all dream of living in the perfectly.....

Gerund uses

Some verbs are followed by the gerund, not by the infinitive, e.g. avoid, finish, give up, hate, imagine, involve, keep, mind, suggest, enjoy, deny, postpone, resist, admit, explain, etc.

After certain expressions: it's no use, can't stand, get used to, there's no point in, it's not worth, can't help, be used to.

While people are getting used to being transported.....

Compound adjectives with numbers, colours and proper names

When numbers are used as the first part of a compound adjective, use a hyphen to connect them to the noun that follows them. This applies whether the number is written in words or in digits.

E.g. The student gave a 20-minute presentation to his classmates.

However, a hyphen is not required if the number is the second word in the compound adjective.

E.g. He is a victim of type 2 diabetes.

When using a fraction as part of a compound adjective, it should be hyphenated.

E.g. A quarter-million dollars is still a large amount of money.

In compound adjectives about age, distance and time, the plural noun becomes an adjective and so it is invariable.

E.g. This girl is 5 years old

She is a five-year- old girl

E.g. The tower is 300 feet high

It's a 300-foot-high tower

E.g. The exam lasts 2 hours

It's a two-hour exam

In colour combinations, modifiers are hyphenated.

E.g. a blue-green solution

Compound Adjectives made from Proper nouns don't need a hyphen though must have capital letters.

E.g. I bought the James Jackson tickets for us.

James Jackson is a compound adjective describing the tickets (What type of tickets? James Jackson tickets).

Since the adjective is a Proper noun, we don't need a hyphen between the two names.
